Or maybe you're a vet at this.

Either way, you need to stay motivated, and having sources of inspiration helps with that.

One of the best things I did when starting out in the fashion game, and something that you can do for yourself, is gather sources of inspiration. After all, once you have a goal to reach, or look to get to, everything else starts taking care of itself.

Want to be inspired? You got to really start moving forward with your beard journey. You do need to be inspired to start moving forward with your beard Journey. When I'm out and about in the streets....

It's only when I see another brother who put together a sick look...

That I decide that hey, I want that look too.

Otherwise, you might lose motivation, which brings lack of Interest. Don't give up three weeks and then decide to shave your beard off! So, check out these sources of inspiration from other brehs who are doing it bigger and better in the game today.

"On a black man, the beard is more than a cover-up for razor bumps...it is a statement."

- The Beard Bible

Wow!

So, I was blown away when I went to this site. This site is a fantastic example of another brother who is doing it big on the internet today. The presentation, the quality, and the design are all excellent.

This site is run by Quinn Gordon. If you read the about story, it's pretty moving. He created the website to give men of color a positive resource to visit on the web, whether it be for black men beards, fashion, or otherwise. I can get behind that!

It's just as much about giving men of color platform as it is anything else. A few things Quinn has done:

- Create a calendar that features black men and their beards
- Network with publications, magazines, and editorials in the fashion and style world
- Put together some dope social media accounts featuring black men and their beards

Make sure to check out his site, and his Instagram page. They even have a section called Beard Care University, which shows you step by step instructions on how to care for your beard! Check that site out.

2\) Bevel

You've probably heard of Bevel before. These guys are a big deal in the world of fashion and style today. They've got celebrities in the black community to rep them and their products, which is pretty awesome and great publicity.

Bevel is on the web to sell its two main products, the trimmer and the razor. In particular, they're known for their blades, which are used in many barber shops today.

And yep, they've been dropped in rap music.

Their products won the 2016 GQ Best in Grooming Award, which is a pretty high honor in the Shaving industry. And best of all, their products are made for black skin and black men beards.

But beyond that, their Blog, has tons of amazing photo essays showing you how to take care of your own beard. And, they've got some shaving 101 videos that will show you how to properly grow, manage, and care for your beard.

Bevel's CEO, Tristan Walker, has put together an amazing product line and resource for men of color. Bevel helps with everything from the shaving, to the aesthetic. Every time I visit this website, I'm reminded to keep my line up sharp.

All right, this site is run by one of my favorite black entrepreneurs on the web today. Brandon Patton has put together an amazing resource. This site and brand designed to help man of color groom and manage their beards .

On top of that, he's actually running a great Instagram account designed to show off beards of all styles. When you come to the front page, you might be taken aback by the amount of recommendations. Don't worry but Brandon knows black men beards inside and out.

He's passionate about he's passionate about beards and it shows. There's lots of great discussion and articles on the website about how to care for and manage your beard. Brandon has also got a email list that you can join for more news and some product recommendations.

They have assembled variety of different looks, shapes, and grooming tips when it comes to black men beards. If you hop on Google, and Google “black men beards Pinterest”, you'll find several different collections and boards popping up in the search results.
